Why These Natural Ingredients?

Taurine

Taurine is a non-essential amino acid manufactured in the body from cysteine. Taurine supports optimal kidney function and can help with fluid retention. Women seem to require a higher dietary intake of Taurine since the female hormone estradiol suppresses the formation of Taurine in the liver.

Taurine is known for helping balance calcium and potassium in muscle cells, and is an important factor in helping the heart muscle pump stronger. Several studies indicate taurine is a safe, effective therapeutic tool in the management of various types of cardiovascular conditions. Research has indicated reduced serum cholesterol levels in human subjects when compared to placebo. Research has also shown taurine to be capable of lowering blood pressure due to its positive inotropic effects.
