

Science is Progressing . . .

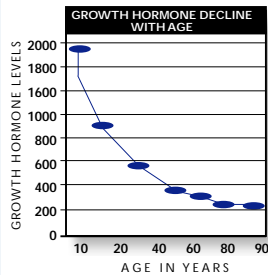

What causes aging?

The way we age is influenced by numerous factors, including:

- Genetic makeup, the expression of phenotype and biological individuality
- Hormonal / nutritional deficiencies
- Mental, emotional and spiritual state
- Life-style, diet, exercise, and environment

As we age, our bodies' natural ability to produce and release Human Growth Hormone (hGH) diminishes. The continual decline of hGH contributes to changes associated with aging. Some experts now believe that the process of aging is actually the direct result of declining hGH.

However, until now the only way to increase hGH levels was by injecting synthetic recombinant hGH into the body on a daily basis. Besides adopting changes that positively influence longevity and quality of life, we had no other treatment modalities at our disposal, until now.

How can we slow the Aging Process?

Today we are more knowledgeable, aware and play an active role in making our health care choices. This patient driven demand on science to accelerate and discover new, effective, safe and innovative treatments to reverse aging has led to the advent of Trans-D Tropin®.
